It must have been the wind. It was at the foot of Victoria's majestic Mount Arapiles that Brigitte Muir first conceived the dream to climb. I squinted as I let my eyes glide on the ridge in front of me, the growing crevasses, the smooth domes leaping to the blue walls of the serac, the curve of the rocky face towards the hidden snow of the summit.

With the wind in my hair
So many roads I've yet to travel
So many friends I haven't met
So many new adventures just around the bend
Plenty of mysteries to unravel
Tons of mistakes to not regret
So much to see and to do and to be, a whole life to spend
And it doesn't end
And I got the wind in my hair and a song in my heart and the fun's only started

It feels like the wind's a part of you, like it's essential, if you know what I mean, something you can hardly imagine life without. But it's got to pass. So you can get on with things without all the confusion of that wind in your hair. — Jack Ketchum
